Terry Collins always knew he wanted to be a writer when he grew up. A former award-winning newspaper reporter and columnist, he now writes poetry, fiction, nonfiction, and graphic novels for readers of all ages. He also teaches literature and creative writing, helping to inspire other lovers of the written word. Terry lives in his hometown in North Carolina with his wife, Ginny, and their devoted dog, Bosley. A lifelong reader, he has a personal library that outgrew his house years ago. Despite his wife's gentle protests over a lack of space, he believes a person can never own too many books.

I had a lot of fourth graders this year interested in biographies, so I found different ones to try out.

The graphic novels were a great hit! This one about Elvis is a favorite. His life is presented in comic book format which holds students' interest and many of them feel like they're reading just for entertainment without realizing the history they're learning.
