Gr 3•Four modern-day Boston tweens each receive a mysterious yellow envelope promising them "a very special, once-in-a-lifetime experience": the chance to time travel to 1863 and photograph President Abraham Lincoln delivering the Gettysburg Address. Things don’t go quite as smoothly as planned, however, and the four find themselves knee-deep in an adventure wilder than they could have imagined. Fiction featuring Abraham Lincoln will always grab readers, and this middle grade entry into the genre should be no different; the protagonists meet Honest Abe, his firecracker son Tad, and even the infamous John Wilkes Booth. Gutman offers solid middle grade historical fiction with a briskly moving, if at times slightly rushed, story that leaves readers ready for a sequel. Non-genre fans will enjoy both its silly sci-fi flourishes and the fish-out-water humor of having 21st-century tween protagonists navigate Gettysburg's stinky 19th-century streets. Add in Gutman's broad fan base, and this will be a high-demand title. In addition, Gutman does a commendable job of at least somewhat incorporating the issues of slavery and the equality of all people at the root of the Civil War into his story, and his inclusion of a black protagonist gives the narrative additional resonance. VERDICT A fine purchase for middle grade fiction collections that will entice a wide audience and circulate well. —Ted McCoy, Springfield City Library, MA

“History can be hilarious, at least in the hands of author Dan Gutman.” (Washington Post)

“Breezy, good-natured fun and a fair amount of history, too.” (Kirkus)

“A fun and fast read, illustrated with photos of the past that really do exist.” (Booklist)

“This will be a high-demand title.” (School Library Journal)

This book reads like a history lesson trying to be a story rather than a story that also happens to be a history lesson. The omniscient narrator took me out of the action and kept me from getting a feel for any of the characters. The entire episode felt superficial.

Dan Gutman is great! First The Genius Files, now The Flashback Four! The Lincoln Project is my class read aloud book now and we WILL finish it before our last day of school this week!
